Many works of literature deal with the question of what is right and wrong.

1. Make a list of human behaviours that you believe are right and ones that you think are wrong.

2. In a group, discuss whether you think it is ever right to lie.

Discuss the following with a partner, putting them in order from right to wrong:

A man puts a woman down.

A soldier asks a woman to marry his friend.

A man puts a woman down because she puts him down.

A group of women speak about their friend behind her back.

A group of women speak about their friend, knowing she is listening.

A group of soldiers come home from a war and stay with their friend.

A man pretends to be someone else.

A man pretends to be kissing someone else’s fiancée.

A group of men speak about a woman’s love for their friend, knowing he is listening.

A man rejects a woman at the altar.

A man rejects a woman at the altar because he believes she has cheated on him.

A father threatens to disown his daughter.

A father threatens to disown his innocent daughter.

A woman asks her boyfriend to kill another man.

A father tricks a man into marrying his daughter.

A man lies about his brother.

A man flirts with the woman his friend is in love with.
