Teacher’s information

While you could use this as a slide show, it was actually designed to be printed out on A4 or (even better) A3 paper and put up around the school.

The fill in sheet is available as a Word document. Students then wander about the school/library/designated area and try to fill in the missing information - collaboration is to be encouraged!

For best effect, ask staff (in advance) to send/give you their favourite lines from books and stick these up too, perhaps in a different colour or font. An extract often sticks in the mind and at least a few students will find the book and read it if they were struck by the excerpt.

Enjoy!

Answers

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>1</th>
<th>The lorry-driver looked ruefully at his planks in the marsh. They were now out of sight in the mud. Uncle Quentin, feeling rather foolish in pyjamas and rugs, spoke to him...</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TITLE: Five go to Smuggler’s Top  AUTHOR: Enid Blyton</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Mr Ollivander touched the lightning scar on Harry’s forehead with a long, white finger. ‘I’m sorry to say I sold the wand that did it,’ he said softly. ‘Thirteen and a half inches. Yew. Powerful wand...’</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TITLE: Harry Potter and the Philosopher’s Stone  AUTHOR: J.K. Rowling</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>Professor McGonagall pointed them into a classroom which was empty except for Peeves, who was busy writing rude words on the blackboard...</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TITLE: Harry Potter and the Philosopher’s Stone  AUTHOR: J.K. Rowling</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2</td>
<td>But Neville was clearly steeling himself to do something desperate. ‘I won’t let you do it,’ he said, hurrying to stand in front of the portrait hole. ‘I’ll - I’ll fight you!’</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TITLE: Harry Potter and the Philosopher’s Stone  AUTHOR: J.K. Rowling</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3</td>
<td>Saxon Winebald went off to Rome with his dad and his brother Willibald. (Note: I did not make up these silly names. Blame their dad, Saint Richard the Saxon.)</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>TITLE: The Smashing Saxons  AUTHOR: Terry Deary</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Page</td>
<td>Excerpt</td>
<td>Title</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------</td>
<td>--------------------------------------------</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4</td>
<td>I had my football. I had a chance. I kept telling myself that over and over again. But the world stayed stubbornly black about me, and I could feel the water slowly chilling me to death.</td>
<td>Title: Kensuke’s Kingdom</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Children also discovered that if they wore the mask and blew very hard, the air rushed out of the side and made a very rude noise. The punishment for doing this in school was usually a whack with the cane!</td>
<td>Title: The Blitzed Brits</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>Munitions factories (which made shells, bullets and explosives) were disguised as duck ponds so that the enemy bombers couldn’t pick them out.</td>
<td>Title: The Blitzed Brits</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>The Second World War was very different from every war the British people had ever been in before. It wasn’t just soldiers who faced death and injury every day…</td>
<td>Title: The Blitzed Brits</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>But then. Panic. There in front of him, in the middle of the road, rearing up and whinnying, was a huge black horse, its hooves flailing the air. James just managed to swerve round it and brought the car to a skidding halt, ten feet away.</td>
<td>Title: Silverfin</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>It was only now, when it was too late, that they began to realise that none of this added up. A car that had crashed on the motorway would have simply pulled onto the hard shoulder - if it had been able to drive at all.</td>
<td>Title: Snakehead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>Ash had warned him to keep his eyes open and perhaps it was thanks to him that Alex spotted the man on the other side of the road, half hidden behind a vegetable stall.</td>
<td>Title: Snakehead</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>The next minute was the longest of Alex’s life. He could feel himself moving but he could see nothing. When he tried to look, everything was a swirl of dark grey and the water beat against his eyes.</td>
<td>Title: Snakehead</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 8 | It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife. However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered as the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters.
TITLE: Pride and Prejudice
AUTHOR: Jane Austen |
|---|---|
| 9 | He swallowed. His throat was very dry. He had crossed a line; from the ordinary world of carol singers and bicycles and model shops into this bizarre world where a dead man sat calmly at his desk, forever frozen in the act of writing a letter.
TITLE: Double or Die
AUTHOR: Charlie Higson |
| 10 | ‘Convicts, sergeant?’ asked Mr. Wopsle, in a matter-of-course way. ‘Ay!’ returned the sergeant, ‘two. They’re pretty well known to be out on the marshes still, and they won’t try to get clear of ‘em before dusk. Anybody here seen anything of any such game?’ Everybody, myself excepted, said no, with confidence. Nobody thought of me.
TITLE: Great Expectations
AUTHOR: Charles Dickens |
| 11 | ‘But I’ll find him,’ he said fiercely. ‘I’ll find him somehow.’ To be honest, I wasn’t sure how much I really believed all this about a white lion. I just didn’t think lions could be white.
TITLE: The Butterfly Lion
AUTHOR: Michael Morpurgo |
| 12 | Despite flying into the brightness of the morning, Wendy, in her flimsy sundress, gave a shiver for the sunlight was thinner and paler than she remembered. The shadows were longer - some rocky pinnacles and pine trees had three or four shadows all sprawling in different directions. Wendy knew they had been right to come: all was not right in Neverland.
TITLE: Peter Pan in Scarlet
AUTHOR: Geraldine McCaughrean |
| 13 | Mole thought his happiness was complete when, as he meandered aimlessly along, suddenly he stood by the edge of a full-fed river. Never in his life had he seen a river before - this sleek, sinuous, full-bodied animal, chasing and chuckling, gripping things with a gurgle and leaving them with a laugh, to fling itself on fresh playmates that shook themselves free, and were caught and held again. The mole was bewitched, entranced, fascinated.
TITLE: The Wind in the Willows
AUTHOR: Kenneth Grahame |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Excerpt</th>
<th>Title</th>
<th>Author</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>14</td>
<td>A secret’s a weighty thing to carry. I wondered often if I should hunt Myrddin out and tell him about Gwenhwyfar and Bedwyr. After all, I was meant to be his spy, wasn’t I? I couldn’t decide.</td>
<td>Here Lies Arthur</td>
<td>Philip Reeve</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>Tom was thinking about the Past, that Time made so far away. Time had taken this Present of Hatty’s and turned it into his Past.</td>
<td>Tom’s Midnight Garden</td>
<td>Philippa Pearce</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>Rain fell that night, a fine, whispering rain. Many years later Meggie had only to close her eyes and she could still hear it, like tiny fingers tapping on the windowpane.</td>
<td>Inkheart</td>
<td>Cornelia Funke</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>‘All books are in safe hands with me,’ replied Elinor, sounding cross. ‘You know that. They’re my children, my inky children and I look after them well. I keep the sunlight away from their pages, I dust them and protect them from hungry bookworms and grubby human fingers. This one shall have a place of honour...’</td>
<td>Inkheart</td>
<td>Cornelia Funke</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>Farid left, going the same way that Dustfinger had gone the night before, disappearing as if the ghosts who lurked in the darkness had eaten him alive.</td>
<td>Inkheart</td>
<td>Cornelia Funke</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17</td>
<td>‘My darling,’ she said at last, ‘are you sure you don’t mind being a mouse for the rest of your life?’ ‘I don’t mind at all,’ I said. ‘It doesn’t matter who you are or what you look like so long as somebody loves you.’</td>
<td>The Witches</td>
<td>Roald Dahl</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>Simon Mayo showed perfect timing when he said excitedly, ‘And Lineker scored the equaliser thirteen minutes before the end. Talk about a last minute goal!’</td>
<td>Foul Football</td>
<td>Michael Coleman</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>Then she saw that there was a light ahead of her; not a few inches away from where the back of the wardrobe ought to have been, but a long way off... she found that she was standing in the middle of a wood at night-time with snow under her feet and snowflakes falling through the air.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>---</td>
<td>---</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TITLE: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe AUTHOR: C.S. Lewis</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>The Queen let another drop fall from her bottle on to the snow, and instantly there appeared a round box, tied with green silk ribbon, which, when opened, turned out to contain several pounds of the best Turkish Delight. Each piece was sweet and light to the very centre and Edmund had never tasted anything more delicious.</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>TITLE: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe AUTHOR: C.S. Lewis</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
| 19 | ‘He knows that unless I have blood as the Law says, all Narnia will be overturned and perish in fire and water.’

‘It is very true,’ said Aslan. ‘I do not deny it.’ |
| TITLE: The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe AUTHOR: C.S. Lewis |
| 20 | Holly pointed to her new blue eye. ‘We’ll always be a part of each other now.’

Artemis tapped the cheek below his fairy hazel eye. ‘I’ll keep an eye out for you.’

‘Was that a joke? My goodness, you are changing.’ |
| TITLE: Artemis Fowl and the Lost Colony AUTHOR: Eoin Colfer |
The lorry-driver looked ruefully at his planks in the marsh. They were now out of sight in the mud. Uncle Quentin, feeling rather foolish in pyjamas and rugs, spoke to him…

TITLE: Five go to Smuggler’s Top

AUTHOR: 1
Mr Ollivander touched the lightning scar on Harry’s forehead with a long, white finger. ‘I’m sorry to say I sold the wand that did it,’ he said softly. ‘Thirteen and a half inches. Yew. Powerful wand...’

TITLE: 2
AUTHOR: J.K. Rowling
Professor McGonagall pointed them into a classroom which was empty except for Peeves, who was busy writing rude words on the blackboard...
But Neville was clearly steeling himself to do something desperate. 'I won’t let you do it,' he said, hurrying to stand in front of the portrait hole. 'I’ll – I’ll fight you!'

TITLE: 2
AUTHOR: J.K. Rowling
Saxon Winebald went off to Rome with his dad and his brother Willibald. (Note: I did not make up these silly names. Blame their dad, Saint Richard the Saxon.)

TITLE: The Smashing Saxons
AUTHOR: 3
I had my football. I had a chance. I kept telling myself that over and over again. But the world stayed stubbornly black about me, and I could feel the water slowly chilling me to death.
Children also discovered that if they wore the mask and blew very hard, the air rushed out of the side and made a very rude noise. The punishment for doing this in school was usually a whack with the cane!

TITLE: 5
AUTHOR: Terry Deary
Munitions factories (which made shells, bullets and explosives) were disguised as duck ponds so that the enemy bombers couldn’t pick them out.

TITLE: 5
AUTHOR: Terry Deary
The Second World War was very different from every war the British people had ever been in before. It wasn’t just soldiers who faced death and injury every day…

TITLE: 5
AUTHOR: Terry Deary
But then, Panic. There in front of him, in the middle of the road, rearing up and whinnying, was a huge black horse, its hooves flailing the air. James just managed to swerve round it and brought the car to a skidding halt, ten feet away.

TITLE: Silverfin
AUTHOR: 6
It was only now, when it was too late, that they began to realise that none of this added up. A car that had crashed on the motorway would have simply pulled onto the hard shoulder – if it had been able to drive at all.
Ash had warned him to keep his eyes open and perhaps it was thanks to him that Alex spotted the man on the other side of the road, half hidden behind a vegetable stall.
The next minute was the longest of Alex’s life. He could feel himself moving but he could see nothing. When he tried to look, everything was a swirl of dark grey and the water beat against his eyes.

TITLE: 7
AUTHOR: Anthony Horowitz
It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune must be in want of a wife. However little known the feelings or views of such a man may be on his first entering a neighbourhood, this truth is so well fixed in the minds of the surrounding families, that he is considered as the rightful property of some one or other of their daughters.

TITLE: 8
AUTHOR: Jane Austen
He swallowed. His throat was very dry. He had crossed a line; from the ordinary world of carol singers and bicycles and model shops into this bizarre world where a dead man sat calmly at his desk, forever frozen in the act of writing a letter.

TITLE: Double or Die
AUTHOR: 9
‘Convicts, sergeant?’ asked Mr. Wopsle, in a matter-of-course way.
‘Ay!’ returned the sergeant, ‘two. They're pretty well known to be out on the marshes still, and they won't try to get clear of ‘em before dusk. Anybody here seen anything of any such game?’
Everybody, myself excepted, said no, with confidence. Nobody thought of me.

TITLE: Great Expectations
AUTHOR: 10
‘But I’ll find him,’ he said fiercely. ‘I’ll find him somehow.’

To be honest, I wasn’t sure how much I really believed all this about a white lion. I just didn’t think lions could be white.

TITLE: The Butterfly Lion
AUTHOR: 11
Despite flying into the brightness of the morning, Wendy, in her flimsy sundress, gave a shiver for the sunlight was thinner and paler than she remembered. The shadows were longer – some rocky pinnacles and pine trees had three or four shadows all sprawling in different directions. Wendy knew they had been right to come: all was not right in Neverland.
Mole thought his happiness was complete when, as he meandered aimlessly along, suddenly he stood by the edge of a full-fed river. Never in his life had he seen a river before – this sleek, sinuous, full-bodied animal, chasing and chuckling, gripping things with a gurgle and leaving them with a laugh, to fling itself on fresh playmates that shook themselves free, and were caught and held again. The mole was bewitched, entranced, fascinated.

TITLE: 13
AUTHOR: Kenneth Grahame
A secret’s a weighty thing to carry. I wondered often if I should hunt Myrddin out and tell him about Gwenhwyfar and Bedwyr. After all, I was meant to be his spy, wasn’t I? I couldn’t decide.

TITLE: Here Lies Arthur
AUTHOR: 14
Tom was thinking about the Past, that Time made so far away. Time had taken this Present of Hatty’s and turned it into his Past.

TITLE: Tom’s Midnight Garden
AUTHOR: 15
Rain fell that night, a fine, whispering rain. Many years later Meggie had only to close her eyes and she could still hear it, like tiny fingers tapping on the windowpane.

TITLE: 16
AUTHOR: Cornelia Funke
'All books are in safe hands with me,’ replied Elinor, sounding cross. ‘You know that. They’re my children, my inky children and I look after them well. I keep the sunlight away from their pages, I dust them and protect them from hungry bookworms and grubby human fingers. This one shall have a place of honour…’

TITLE: 16
AUTHOR: Cornelia Funke
Farid left, going the same way that Dustfinger had gone the night before, disappearing as if the ghosts who lurked in the darkness had eaten him alive.

TITLE: 16
AUTHOR: Cornelia Funke
‘My darling,’ she said at last, ‘are you sure you don’t mind being a mouse for the rest of your life?’

‘I don’t mind at all,’ I said. ‘It doesn’t matter who you are or what you look like so long as somebody loves you.’

TITLE: The Witches
AUTHOR: 17
Simon Mayo showed perfect timing when he said excitedly, ‘And Lineker scored the equaliser thirteen minutes before the end. Talk about a last minute goal!’

TITLE: Foul Football
AUTHOR: 18
Then she saw that there was a light ahead of her; not a few inches away from where the back of the wardrobe ought to have been, but a long way off... she found that she was standing in the middle of a wood at night-time with snow under her feet and snowflakes falling through the air.

TITLE: 19

AUTHOR: C.S. Lewis
The Queen let another drop fall from her bottle on to the snow, and instantly there appeared a round box, tied with green silk ribbon, which, when opened, turned out to contain several pounds of the best Turkish Delight. Each piece was sweet and light to the very centre and Edmund had never tasted anything more delicious.

TITLE: 19
AUTHOR: C.S. Lewis
‘He knows that unless I have blood as the Law says, all Narnia will be overturned and perish in fire and water.’

‘It is very true,’ said Aslan. ‘I do not deny it.’
Holly pointed to her new blue eye. ‘We’ll always be a part of each other now.’ Artemis tapped the cheek below his fairy hazel eye. ‘I’ll keep an eye out for you.’ ‘Was that a joke? My goodness, you are changing.’

TITLE: Artemis Fowl and the Lost Colony
AUTHOR: 20